

2013 Motor Car Digest “Writer of the Year”

HONORING THOSE THAT MAKE IT POSSIBLE

MOTOR-CAR digest

Motor Car Digest has grown from concept to reality to success. The purpose of Motor Car Digest is to offer a magazine that is written by not only staff writers, but real car people like you and me. So in the end, you have a real deal "for the people, by the people" publication. In the meantime, contributors are building a digest to share with the world. What better way to learn about your favorite ride, share that special event or help others with that special technical article, than to get it published in an internationally recognized publication? While all published articles make the front page, contributor articles can be chosen by our editors for full features. Or (even better), you could get your car or story on the very popular monthly Motor Car Digest cover. Who doesn't want their ride on a magazine cover?

While this all sounds great, the concept of Motor Car Digest would never work without the many digest contributors and writers who have a passion for sharing. So with this in mind, the editors and publishers of MCD sat down and tried to make a very tough decision. Who would be the 2013 Motor Car Digest "Writer of the Year"? After very little debate, the decision was clear.

Motor Car Digest is proud to announce that the 2013 "Writer of the Year" honor goes to none other than... David Newton!

"David has contributed 28 articles that cover everything from how to use clothespins in the shop to why drivers drive slow in the fast lane."

David started contributing to Motor Car Digest (MCD) in March of 2013 with his first article titled "Defining Moments", a retrospective look into the "moments" we have that create our passion for great cars. From there, David became a regular weekly contributor to MCD with his popular "Loose Stuff" column that captures the little things that we all ponder from time to time. In the meantime, David has covered events from the exclusive Monticello Motor Club to Pennsylvania drives and a detailed review of his favorite ride, the Porsche Cayman. David has contributed 28 articles that cover everything from how to use clothespins in the workshop to why motorists drive slowly in the fast lane. David's writing style is unique and developed from a simple concept of "Limit what you say, but impact what is said."

As a back-story, David is the proud owner of an impeccable 2009 Porsche Cayman that he has tastefully customized. David is currently a board member of the Porsche Club of America's Riesentöter region and is a regular contributor to the Riesentöter newsletter. As he says best in his bio "I don't race, I am not a mechanic or engineer; but draw from my unique perspective as an enthusiast who loves everything and anything connected with exceptional cars."

David is a true ambassador to ALL car lovers across the land, and carries that torch with great pride. He is a true enthusiast and all around gentleman. Not to mention a first class automotive journalist.

Please help congratulate David on this honor, and stay tuned to MCD for more great articles and insight from the 2013 Motor Car Digest Writer of the Year... David Newton.
